Loyalty

For the man who is discouraged, downbearted by the rosh of events, oppressed by petty fallures, there is no stimulant like the compelling power of an intensive loyalty. Let the man who is not making good in his work dedicate himself to a new sense of allegiance to those with whom and for whom he labors, says the Longriew News. Out of rigorous loyalty to his fellow workers and his employer will come the spirit of which success is forged. Let the mun whose life seems doll and sordid find a loyalty-a loyalty to his home, perhaps, to his city, to his college, to his church-and life will be transformed for him as the gleam of purpose dispels the clouds of cynicism and mistrust. Out of loyalty to others will come that greater logalty to self that transmutes a person into a personality, a slave into a servant, and a linman into a mon. Let us attain to a loyalty and hold fast to It.

is it novanced age slipping over us, or is it an actual state of affairs, that makes us believe that there used to be more bluebleds than there are today? naka the Port Wayne News-Sentinel. It's good to observe that there are rill a good many bluebleds now-but we con't help wishing there were more. Nothing is more beautiful in all the alogdom of birds than the bluebird. whom John Burroughs described as having the tinge of heaven on his back and the tloge of earth on his breast. That seems to be the best spiritual description of this blitte herald of fairer days. Somebody has anid that the aight of a bluebird "seems to make you glad for the beauties of earth and to make you think of a world fairer still." No wonder the bluebird has long served as the eternal and universal symbol of happiness among men. There must be bluebirds in heaven. It wouldn't be heaven without them.

Why not, speculates the Lafayette Journal and Courier, an adjustable ticel for milady's allpper-one that can be lodated for evening, definted for early morning and semi-blown up for ofternoon or street use? A rubber Leel filled with nir ought to provide the resiliency and cushlony of feet needed. Then, too, with bolloon tirels the reckless "stomper" of the donce floor might be forcefully reminded by an recontenal blowent at the heet that the proprieties were being ten entimelantently "tremped" on lancers of the "black buttom" and the startestee would then be compolled to carry sparce. The regular filling station service of the ballroom FIRE ALARM SIGNALS talget coulty for equipped to supply "free ole." And as for handling prospects! "Like magic she does it," James Hunt would murmur in admiration as she landed some millionaire with a high-priced showy place, and had the decorators presenting their plans to the new owner before one could say Jack Robinson-supposing one mentioned such a low person in the office of Hunt & Hunt.

"I wonder if Miss Andrews was ever a girl-flapper -now, like my nieces and these other youngsters all so boyish in looks that they puzzle me. Miss Andrews is smart-looking, -of course, but-well-she never had a romance, I'll swear."

Which was unkind, for all the elements of a first-class thriller were tangled up in what she called to herself the "dear past."

Romance? Miss Hunt was steeped in it. But when one pays the best tailor in town fancy prices to keep one tooking businessilke, and when dark hair, a bit curly as it is, minds its mistress and stays put all day long. It must be admitted that there is little color of a romantic hue in the appear-

No. Miss Andrews was more apt to scent her apartment with good coffee-a cup of which she enjoyed over her open tire of an evening.

But when the real story began to happen it was June and a bot June, and the coffee had been foregone for a week or more. Miss Andrews was restless and wished she could take; her vacation a bit early.

"Can I be getting old? That surely "I wish-I wish-dear me-what do "Well, I may as well forget IL". Forgetting made her cross, perhaps, for she shoved Fellx Shoe-Polish rudely away when he came purring after a romp with his entnip mouse.

"Go away! You ought to be out in the grass, chasing field mice, with catnip leaves in your ears, Felix! I wonder why women must work alone so long for a little bit of living money? James Hunt has had enough to retire on this five years-and I've helped bim make it, but I get only a 'raise' once a year and a bonus at New Year's. "I wish

What Miss Andrews wished was forzotten the next day when Mr. Hunt the elder told her he wanted her to take a look at some Kingston property. Leage right away-see what kind of shape it was in. A loan on it -see if it was worth another. Set a price, and everything. She knew what to do. And here was the-location,

Miss Andrews gasped. She hadn't known who had bought that place. How many years it had been since and had seen it! Just down the road from her old home. by Falling Meteorite The bitting of a human being by a meteorite is probably the carest of all accidents, according to Dr. E. E. Free. Yet that is what happened, says Pathfinder Magazine, to a three-year-old Japanese buby living near Sukatu, a village northeast of Tokyo. The incident was reported to Popular Astronomy by Issel Yamamoto of Kyoto university.

At the time of the occurrence the child happened to be playing out of doors alone. Hearing a sudden cry the mother rushed out to find the infant seared across the neck as if by a bot fron. Further search disclosed a small stone in a fold of the child's dress. It was still alightly warm. which evidently and caused the burn on the neck. Found White Customs

Hard to Understand A naked South sea cannibal once told Jack McLaren, the globe trotter, that he could not understand why whites dressed in the daytime and un-dressed at night. "In the night, when it is cold, we people put our clothes on," he said in effect; "and in the daytime, when it is bot, we take them off!"

In a remote Solomon island village t met asked McLaren was it true, as he had beard, that in white men's countries the people quarreled and stole so much that strong men called policemen continually walked the streets to keep the peace. In his village, he said, there was little quarreling, except with other villages or with intruders, and hardly any stealing at all. He said he had thought that white men would have known better than to behave like that.

Another savage thought it strange that whites rejoiced and made hollday only at specified times, such as Christmas and Easter. Cat's Meow

The cat who loves cod liver oil is of cod liver oil than liver or raw hamburg steak, or salmon, or kidneys, or cat food-and the family know it. Recently he decided to go out for the evening. The youngster did not wish to have him go, but he sild out on the steps looking around for worlds to conquer. No calling for "Kitty, kitty," would budge him an inch.

Then the small youngster ran and got the cod liver oil bottle. She held It out to alm as balt. He gave one sniff in the air and then came to kind. A smile is often associated with the bottle as true as a needle to a magnet. The child walked into the house with the bottle, the cat following—and she had him.—Springfield Union.

in Insurance Figures An insurance company of New York announces from its accumulation of data and figures that fat men are more honest than their "lean and hungry" being put upon. He sure is more fond brothers. Which corroborates Shakespeare's opinion expressed long ago when he made his Caesar say: "Let me have men about me that are fat." The fat man is noted for his ready and hearty laugh, and that may explain, in a way, some of his honesty. It is hard to picture a good-humored, open-faced, Jolly man as anything but fair and square and straight. Of course "a man may smile and smile and be a villala," but that sort of mirth is a pinch-faced, baif-strangled wickedness, but a free, belly-shaking laugh betokens a gulleless genius, We are glad to hear a good word for the fat man. There has been much sympathy and "ragging" wasted on them—especially on fat poys. They have long suffered under the old heartless saying that "nobody loves a fat man." It is not the truth but the prevalence of the saying that has worked them injury- particularly with the opposite and willful sex. All rules have exceptions. Let the heavy fellows remember that the saying nobody loves a fat man is to truck than the one that all fat men are honest --Exchange.

"Deodands" Would Sct King Up in Business

If it were endemand or possible for the king of Oscal Britain and Iraland eladly to exercise the royal preregatives, he would, in the course of a few mouths, become the owner of many relicies, especially unior cars. that traverse the streets and reads of his tingdom, since he is entitled to all deadands.

A decidand is son nettele which has proved the torseduce and accidental oceasion of the death of any reasonable creature." This right was for hundreds of years enforced as a means of aveiling the royal exchaquer and, legally speaking, could still be en-

The Great Man What I must do is all that concerns me, and not what the people think. This rule, equally as arduous in netual and in intellectual life, may serve for a whole distinction between greatness and meanness. It is the harder because you will always find those who think they know what is your duty better than you know it. It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solliude to live after your own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the one. I had never expected to find such crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solliude.-Emer Bon.

Destroying Lawn Anta

In the case of lawn anta where only small area with few nests is concerned, drenching the nests with boll ing water or injecting a small quantity of kerosene or coal oil will be effeetise, and similar treatment will apply to nests between or beneath pay ing stones. Another simple means of destroying such onts in lawns of small extent is to spray the lawns with kerasens emp'sion or with a very strong soup wash, prepared by illusolving any common laundry soap in water at the rate of from half a pound to a pound of soap to the gallon of water.

His Own Rules

A golfer known for his shady character entered for a competition. He was partnered by a nervous and toexperienced player who had, of course, to mark the suspect's card. At the end of the round the un-

French King's Praise The subject of King Henri IV, "le bon rol Henri," he who said Parls was well worth a mass, is inexhaustible and the French always receive a book of anecdotes and biographical dotalls on him with delight. From the latest volume Plerre Van Paassen, writing in the Atlanta Constitution, cults this incident. One day the king was passing through a village where he was obliged to halt for dinner. Before sitting down he asked the host of the tavern: "Invite me the man who passes for being the most spirited in your commune." King Henri was told that it was a fellow named Galllard. "Go and fetch him," ordered the king. The pensant soon arrived. Honri told him to sit opposite at the table and to share his meal of roast chicken with Chablis. "What's your name?" naked the king. "Sire," replied the rustic, "my name is Gaillard." "What difference is there between a galllard (genial, good-hearted fellow) and & paillard (acoundrel) ?" "Sire." came back the peasant without a moment's healtation, "there's only a wooden table between them." "Ventra Saintgris!" roared the king, "that's a good

It was in 1810 that, drilling for salt by hand, Beaty struck oil and natural gas. His crew was drenched with oil and, his tire being near, the gas took fire. Supposing he had drilled into the infernal and a straight face in the presence of regions, Beaty and his men took to the hills and left their camp to burn. About two years later he and a friend returned to the place, filled a barrel with oil, touded it on a raft, and started down the river to Burnside, hoping to find some one there who could tell him what the "devil's tur" really was. - 147 YEARS AGO Story of the Flight of the Marshall Pamily

At the time of the Indian Raid in August, 1781, the family of Davie Marshall was living on the Sanborn farm at Middle Intervale, where Mr. Marshall had built a small log cabin. Mr. Marshal was not at home, and at Middle Intervals where Mr. Mara neighbor worned Mrs. Marshall with day an their way home from Upton. an exaggerated account of the proximity of the Indians, so she started to hide in the woods with her children. The following is from a letter which Mrs. Marshall wrote her son in later

"At this moment I exclaimed, what shall I do? 'Hide in the woods' said my informant. While I was hastening to the woods with my children, I saw my husband coming home. I beckoned to him to hasten and on his coming up, I hastily related what I had heard. He ran into the house and took such provisions as he could readily seize and throw into a sack, and then started with his little store and family into the woods. We traveled lightly and looked cautiously around, expecting every moment to see the faces of the Indians, but after a few hours, our fears considerably subsided, and we sat down to rest. I found myself very much fatigued, and without my ordinary dress, for during the morning I had slipped off my shoes, having nothing on except a thin skirt and a handkerchief over my shoulders. This caused my heart to ache, for we had resolved not to turn back, but to pursue ou way which lay through the wilderness. Starting July 29th After a short halt, we set out again, and traveled until dark. We did not dare to strike light for fear of being discovered by the Indians. We sat there impatiently waiting the morning of the sixth, when we renewed our fourney, but much slower than the day previously. During the afternoon, we were overtaken by a Mr. Dodge*, who had been sent from Bethel to New Fried Clams Potato Chips Gloucester for help. We requested him to inform the first inhabitants he met, of our situation, and give him the course as nearly as he could, and ask them to meet us. Mr. Dodge missed his course to Jackson's camp in No. 4. which he expected first to reach, and came out at Lieut. Bearce's in Hebron. He informed Bearce who immediately set out for Jackson's camp, and on his arrival he obtained two men who went with him as far as the river in the north part of the township, and there struck up a fire and prepared some food. while Mr. Bearco continued in search of ns. THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—That her grandfather is the fee the architectural monstrosity is an "Dinsmore's Folly" is, for eithetic reasons, by no means pleasing in Ethel Dinsmore, modern "lapper." See would fefuse the bequest, but her father, millionaire head of Consolidated Trust, will not allow it. Edith visits the place. Perkins, the caretaker, is the victim of a matrimonial mishan, his wife having left him. Fred James, prespaper reporter, comes, if, Paul, Dinsmore's right-hand man, proposes to Edith and is rejected. He takes the rejection in a melodramatic manner. Edith sees a connection between Perkins' runaway wife and Mr. Paul.

CHAPTER II.—Riding with Fred James, Edita's horse bolts. The run-away is scoped by a stranger who does not give his name. Edith here-after calls bim M. P. (My Preserver).

I heard some one say that anything to do with a girl if her fathe chief had passed the word not to ther happens to be rich. I'll show up at the station and of a single father—and I've had mighty good chances to hear-who would have hesitated to welcome a would-be-son-in-law Just because he was poor, I know Dad wouldn't.

Meanwhile, Mr. Paul was in and out, talking with dad, mostly about that missing one thousand shares, which he seemed unable to trace. He raid very little to me; but what he did say was nice and friendly. It made me feel pretty mean. But, goodness, I couldn't marry the man just It's irregular, of course, but I've because he was taking my refusal to learned that a policeman doesn't make marry him so nicely! At last, howgood just by pulling everybody he ever, he got in bad with me, and after that I felt better. He came to the house one evening while Josephine and I were entertaining Fred in the parlor. I was looking in the big glass over the fireplace (which served as a very good periscope), and I saw him pass the deer, on his way to Dad's room. An hour later, after he had gone, Dad sent for Josephine, and she left me and Fred in the parlor and went to the library. She was gone for so long that Fred grew restless and wanted to leave. He thought, poor boy, that Father was keeping Josephine away as a hint that it was time to close up the house for the night; and could searcely persuade him to stay. succeeded, however; and it was well that I did, for by and by Josephine came back and sald that Father wanted to see Fred.

When Fred had gone to the library put Josephine through the third degree; and, after a lot of hard work, I found out what it was all about. Father had told her not to tell me, but I got it out of her. That is, I got some of it out of ber. I thought I got it all, but in that I was fooled. Josephine played it low down on me that time-and it wasn't the first time. either, as I alscovered later.

No! Josephine did not tell me all that father had sald but she told me enough to make me very angry.

Mr. Paul, it seemed, had heard somewhere, not about that light (that would have been the limit) but about Josephine's and my expeditions with Fred. He knd reported the facts to Father, and he had added that people were saylog that Fred and I were getting too foud of each other and ought to backept apart. Father had been astonished and had sent for Josephine to ask about it. Josephine had confessed to the expeditions, but she hi been flabbergasted by the report about Fred and me. She told Father that she had never suspected It. So Father rent for Fred to ask him about it.

This made me hopping mad. It was like asking Fred his intentions—as if Fred's Intentions mattered! Father ought to have known that my latentions were the only ones of consequence. I flared up when Josephine told me, and I guess I said some mean things about Mr. Paul-conscientious old idiot! Even as I said them I was

After I had quieted down again Josephine wanted to know whether it was true about Fred.

I told her what Fred had said on that horseback ride and how I had tried to encourage him to resume later and how I had falled. Josephine didn't say much; Josephice never does say much; but I could see that she was relieved.

About this time I heard the front door shut; a minute or so later I discovered that Fred had shut it. He had come from Father's den and had gone straight out of the house without stopping to say good-night to Josephine and me. There was only one explanation that I could see; and that was that Pather had insulted him-had ordered him out of the house, most probably. The injustice of the thing made me hopplng mad, and I went straight to Father's room to have it out with him.

But he wouldn't let me in. He called through the locked door that he was too busy to see me and that I must wait till tomorrow. So I waited: know enough not to butt my head against a stone wall; and Father can be the stoniest sort of stone wall on

As a matter of fact I didn't see Father the next day, nor for several days after that. He left for Washington that same midnight and didn't get back till the end of the week. Meanwhile, Fred did not call again, and I got madder than ever. On Friday I called up the office and found that Father had just gotten back; and went straight down town to see him.

At the door of his inner office I met Mr. Paul, also just going in. (I certainly do have rotten luck sometimes). And the next instant, before I could say "howdy do: good by" Father appeared in the door of the office. And with him, of all persons in the world, was Fred.

It was really queer how it happened. Father glanced at Mr. Paul and me and then turned back to Fred and posturely reared at him. "Not i word more, sir," he thundered. "Not a word more! Your conduct has been outrageous. Don't dear to put your foot in this office ag. .. Fred looked thunderstruck. They he gulped and started to speak. Then be apparently decided not to. He just went away. Ue didn't even speak to me; he just to see you. Come inside, and let's have it out." Then he glanced at Mr. Paul. "Paul," he sald, "you'll excuse me for a few minutes, I know, while I talk to Edith. That young jackanapes of a reporter has irritated me more than anyone has dared to do for years.

Of course Mr. Paul said he'd excuse him; and Dad took me on into his office and shut the door. No doubt he had something very important to say, but if he did, I beat him to it. "Father," said I, "I came to tell you something. You'll be happy to hear it, because you suggested it. Otherwise I'm sure I should never have thought of it. I'm in love with Fred James."

I stopped. I was scared for a moment. This was carrying the war into Africa with a vengeance; and I was afraid that father might have apoplexy. But I needn't have worried Father had had verbal bombs exploded under him before. "Good!" he said, without moving a muscle. "I was speaking to Josephine about it only a day or so ago."

This spoiled my game—and I gues I showed it. I hadn't acquired Dad's ing. Moreover, though I knew perfectly well that he was bluffing with words set me against Fred, I was sorry, for Fred, of course, if he bud set his heart on me; but goodness, he wasn't the only one; there were: others.

"Who told you, Father?" I asked for a desperate effort to conceal my dismay by speech.

"Oh, I scarcely know," replied my fond parent, meditatively, "I had been noticing it for some time, of course -noticing it for some time! Can your bent that?-"but when Paul spoke of
